

Brainworks Sponsored London Blizzard Invitational Sledge Hockey Tournament

Brainworks has always focused on helping clients return to the work and life activities they enjoy, as well as try new, challenging ones. We are all about community, participation and the pursuit of individual goals. It is a perfect match then that Brainworks has chosen to sponsor this unique hockey tournament that took place at the Western Fair Sports Centre in London from Friday, January 29-30, 2010.

This tournament is the biggest of its kind in the world. It has drawn teams from all over Ontario, Quebec, Alberta, B.C., Newfoundland and the U.S., and has showcased some of the best sledge hockey players in the sport. Sledge hockey allows physically challenged persons of all ages the opportunity to develop their athletic and social and personal skills in a fun atmosphere. This tournament has become an important fundraiser for the London Blizzard and helps pay for equipment and ice costs that can run very high. Brainworks is proud to be a sponsor.

Sledge hockey is an excellent way for those with brain injuries and other conditions to participate in a competitive activity and develop their athletic, social and personal skills in a fun atmosphere. This tournament drew teams from all over North America, and in the past has showcased some of the best sledge hockey players in the sport. Past Brainworks clients have tried and loved it.
